WITH THE UNITED NATIONS
SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT
GOALS (SDGS).

NO POVERTY & ZERO HUNGER

We are fighting poverty, hunger and malnutrition by reconnecting Indigenous people with the land and with their traditional food systems. By teaching folks how to grow their own food, we are turning food poverty into resilience.

GOOD HEALTH & WELLBEING

Our work is about relearning pre-colonial practices, diets and connections to land that together can heal the roots of poor physical, mental and spiritual wellbeing.

QUALITY EDUCATION

We centre Indigenous Knowledge Systems and holistic learning that bring folks back to our cosmologies, values and traditional teachings.

REDUCING INEQUALITIES & WORKING TOWARDS GENDER EQUALITY

By creating resilient Indigenous food systems we are bringing people out of the industrial food system that has caused so much harm and inequality to Indigenous peoples. In our work we are building networks of support and creating spaces where women, Indigenous folks and other systemically marginalised people are able to step back into their power.

BUILDING SUSTAINABLE COMMUNITIES

We are growing food sustainably, composting, saving ancestral seeds and sharing wider sustainable practices in an inclusive learning environment with an intergenerational vision.

TAKING CLIMATE ACTION

The global industrial food system is a leading contributor to climate change. We are addressing the roots of climate chaos by creating an alternative solution that feeds families.

REGENERATING LIFE ON LAND

We use no pesticides and work organically. This means we are regenerating the soil and the ecosystems around us, one pollinator at a time.
